

Lake Wallace

"The romance of pioneer days centered around Fred Keeble's home on Meridan Hill and the hard working Keeble family. Upon one occasion a strange woman came to the Keeble's home asking for a night's rest and a cup of tea. When the family called her for breakfast she was gone, but when Mother Keeble went to make the bed up later in the morning, she found to her utter amazement, a new born babe asleep in the blankets. This little baby boy was named Wallace and later this young man made his home at the lake north of Colebrook that was thereafter known as Wallace Lake."
